FLOW Analog Clock is a gadget made for Yahoo! Widget Engine, which takes a unique approach towards displaying an analog clock: three separate clocks for telling the hour, minute and second. The tool doesn't have any customization options of its own, making it pretty straightforward and easy to use. After downloading the.widget file, you can double-click it to open it in Yahoo! Widget Engine right away and view the three analog clocks. You can easily tell them apart by the letter inside each clock: H for hours, M for minutes, and S for seconds. Although the app doesn't come with any customization settings of its own, you can configure the options available for all Yahoo! Widget Engine tools. To do this, right-click the clock and select Widget Preferences. You can set the window to stay always on top or always below any other open windows (instead of normal), prevent mouse dragging and other events, or adjust the level of opacity to make the analog clocks more transparent or opaque. The Yahoo! Widget Engine project has been discontinued a while back. Nevertheless, those who have enjoyed this platform can still download and use it to install widgets, including FLOW Analog Clock. Just keep in mind that it will not receive any more updates. FLOW Analog Clock Description: - A gadget for Yahoo! Notre Dame, USC should be far apart in BCS standings Under pressure to clean up the bowl selection process, the BCS selection committee is set to meet this weekend to decide which teams should play in the bowl games. There are plenty of teams that should be in the BCS bowl field, but only a handful of teams are actually deserving. Let's take a look at the top six teams that should be in the BCS and the ones that should be in the out. What are the top six teams that deserve to be in the BCS bowl games? Notre Dame - The Irish have been knocked out of the BCS title game in the final weeks of the season due to the fact that they lost a home game to Miami. However, if Notre Dame had won those two games, the Irish would likely be in the national title game right now. There is no doubt that Notre Dame is the best team in the nation, but they are not deserving of a spot in the title game. USC - With a loss to Stanford and a victory over Notre Dame, USC is out of the national title
