One of our favorite features of the new Lightroom mobile app is its ability to customize your design process. If you have Lightroom Mobile and click on New icon, the app opens to a preconfigured surface. If you open the Surface panel, you can scan items from the Project, Collections, and Library screens with an iPhone camera or another device connected to your Mac, and the app will create a Surface based on the contents. Often times, I open the Project screen and create a Surface based on a photo of something I'm looking for, and I can then scan it from the Surface as I walk around and study it from different angles. If I want to edit the color or add other effects, I can do that on the Surface, and when I'm done I can save the altered surface back to my Lightroom project.
